Held annually, The Boat Race is a side-by-side rowing race between crews from the universities of Oxford and Cambridge along a 4.2-mile (6.8km) tidal stretch of the River Thames in south-west London, England. For the third time in the history of the event, the men's race saw Cambridge lead from the start, eventually winning by a considerable margin to take the overall record to 4330 in their favour. In the women's reserve race, Cambridge's Goldie, who defeated Oxford's Isis by a margin of four lengths. The men's reserve race was the final event of the day and completed a whitewash as Cambridge won, taking the overall record to 8380 in their favour. The races were watched by around 250,000 spectators live, and broadcast around the world. At the time, it was known as the Year of the Consulship of Valentinianus and Anthemius (or, less frequently, year 1208 Ab urbe condita). The denomination 455 for this year has been used since the early medieval period, when the Anno Domini calendar era became the prevalent method in Europe for naming years. March 16 Emperor Valentinian III, age 35, is assassinated by two Hunnic retainers of the late Flavius Aetius, while training with the bow on the Campus Martius (Rome), ending the Theodosian dynasty. His primicerius sacri cubiculi, Heraclius, is also murdered. March 17 Petronius Maximus, former domesticus ("elite bodyguard") of Aetius, becomes (with support of the Roman Senate) emperor of the Western Roman Empire. He secures the throne by bribing officials of the imperial palace Maximus consolidates his power by a forced marriage with Licinia Eudoxia, widow of Valentinian III.Maximus appoints Avitus, most trusted general, to the rank of magister militum and sends him marry Eudocia, eldest daughter of Valentinian III.May 31 Maximus is stoned to death by an angry mob while fleeing Rome. A widespread panic occurs when many citizens hear the news that the Vandals into Rome, after he has promised Pope Leo I not to burn and plunder the city. Genseric sacks the city for a period of two weeks. Eudoxia and her daughters, Eudocia and Placidia, are taken hostage. The loot is sent to the harbour of Ostia and loaded into ships, from whence the Vandals depart and return to Carthage. July 9 Avitus is proclaimed Roman emperor at Toulouse, and later recognised by the Gallic chiefs in Viernum (near Arles). September 21 Avitus enters Rome with a Gallic army. He restores the imperial authority in Noricum (modern Austria) and leaves a Gothic force under Remistus, Visigoth general (magister militum), at Ravenna. The Ostrogoths conquer Pannonia and Dalmatia. Battle of Aylesford: Prince Vortimer rebels against the pro-Anglo-Saxon policies of his father, Vortigern. He is defeated in the battle at Aylesford (Kent). Hengist and his son Oisc become king of Kent. Horsa and Catigern, brother of Vortimer, are killed. The Britons withdraw to London (according to the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle). Skandagupta succeeds Kumaragupta I as ruler of the
Gupta Empire (India). During his reign he crushes the Hun invasion; however, the expense of the wars drains the empire's resources and contributes to its decline. Gaero becomes king of the Korean kingdom of Baekje. [1] Earliest recorded date at Chichen Itza on the Yucatn Peninsula (Mexico) (approximate date). Eastern Hemisphere at the end of the 4th century was shaped by Constantine the Great, who became the first Roman emperor to adopt Christianity. Gaining sole reign of the empire, he is also noted for re-establishing a single imperial capital, choosing the site of ancient Byzantium in 330 (over the current capitals, which had effectively been changed by Diocletian's reforms to Milan in the West, and Nicomedeia in the East) to build the city soon called Nova Roma (New Rome); it was later renamed Constantinople in his honor. The last emperor to control both the eastern and western halves of the empire was Theodosius I. As the century progressed after his death, it became increasingly apparent that the empire had changed in many ways since the time of Augustus. The two-emperor system originally established by Diocletian in the previous century fell into regular practice, and the east continued to grow in importance due to its location far from potential trouble spots, like Central Europe and the East. Late in the century Christianity became the official state religion, and the empire's old pagan culture began to disappear. [citation needed] General prosperity was felt throughout this period, but recurring invasions marked the beginning of the end for the Western Roman Empire. In China, the Jin dynasty, which had united the nation prior in 280, began rapidly facing trouble by the start of the century due to political infighting, which led to the insurrections of the northern barbarian tribes (starting the Sixteen Kingdoms period), which quickly overwhelmed the empire, forcing the Jin court to retreat and entrench itself in the south past the Yangtze river, starting what is known as the Eastern Jin dynasty around 317. Towards the end of the century, Emperor of the Former Qin, Fu Jin, united the north under his banner, and planned to conquer the Jin dynasty in the south, so as to finally reunite the land, but was decisively defeated at the Battle of Fei River in 383, causing massive unrest and civil war in his empire, thereby leading to the Former Qin, and the continued existence of the Eastern Jin dynasty. All these sheets will help you build a winning roster. Download the fantasy football cheat sheet that fits your league and get ready to dominate your 2025 fantasy football drafts. Thats really up to you. Some people prefer a straightforward traditional positional or overall cheat sheet. Others prefer our legacy draft board format. Some like to use our tiers sheet. And still others want to use Jeff Ratcliffes Ultimate Draft Board, which is the exact same sheet Jeff uses in his own drafts. All sheets are custom-produced by hand and are based on Jeffs rankings and/or tiers. Starting after the 4th of July holiday, we update every Monday straight through Labor Day. We will also update if anything major happens during the week. Finally, we update Saturday mornings for the final three weekends before the NFL season starts, since these are the three biggest fantasy draft weekends on the year. Each sheet shows its updated date at the top. We chose this schedule intentionally, and you can be assured that you will always be drafting with the most up-to-date information possible. Absolutely not. Our schedule is set up so that you will have the most up-to-date information. Your cheat sheet will never be stale, even if the update all the sheets. The two boards are built for very different draft styles. The Legacy board works best with a traditional value-based approach. If youre a value-based drafter, this is the board for you. Ratcliffes Ultimate Draft Board is set up for a more nuanced drafter who deploys multiple strategies he uses in his redraft fantasy football drafts. If youre someone who uses a similar approach, you may want to opt for Ratcliffes Ultimate Draft Board. Yes. Yes, Jeffs approach to drafting in redraft leagues is based heavily on his strategies, which you can read about in his Game Plan Draft Guide that releases every summer. Jeff isnt concerned with the precise ordering of players like you see on traditional cheat sheets. Instead, he wants to draft specific types of players at specific times during a draft. Additionally, the difference between where a player ranks in those three scoring formats is marginal, at best. Its an insignificant detail that has zero impact on how Jeff drafts. Because theyre different cheat sheets that are not designed to be one-to-one carbon copies. As noted above, theyre made for two very different styles of drafting. Jeff recommends that you pick a cheat sheet and go with it. And comparing across multiple sheets could end up confusing you, which is exactly what we dont want to happen. Its best to pick one sheet and roll with it. Theres no need because our draft boards can be used for any league size Whether youre in an 8-team, 10-team, 10-team, 12-team, 14-team, 16-team or even larger, our legacy boards and the Ultimate Draft Board will work for you. Thats a default number, but the round grades are not suggestions for where the players should be drafted. Rather, its a way of spatially orienting the players on one sheet of paper to visually show their value relative to each other. We use the word round because its a familiar one to fantasy drafters, but we could have called those groupings anything. Tiers, levels, Bob. Dont read into 12 players being listed for each round. Rather, use both of our draft boards as a way the gauge value and apply strategy on draft day regardless of your league size. No. Jeff labeled those players as do not draft because they are players he will not be drafting this year. Hes very strict about following his board and makes no exceptions. Of course, that applies to you, we recommend using our legacy draft board cheat sheets or one of our other traditional cheat sheets. Unfortunately, at this point, no. These cheat sheets are custom-produced and cannot be altered. But that could certainly change in the future. For the same reason as above, no. We produce these custom sheets by hand in order to give you the highest quality product possible, and that means we can only provide them in PDF form. I'd estimate a maximum of four quarterbacks will go in the first round this year, but I can plausibly see a scenario where just two are selected (Ward and Sanders). Beyond the lack of QB star power, there is also a smaller number of blue-chip players than 2024, especially at wide receiver and offensive tackle. See all 257 picks | Pick-bypick analysis Kiper's grades | Miller's best 100 picks Yates' favorite picks | Overreactions Kiper's Day 1 winners | Day 2 winners Sanders to Browns | Hunter to JaguarsThat being said, the 2025 class offers excellent depth, particularly at running back, wide receiver, defensive tackle, edge rusher, tight end and safety. My top 200 prospects include 26 edge rushers, 24 wide receivers, 22 running backs, 14 safeties and 12 tight ends. Teams that are flush with draft picks this year will happily navigate the boards in Rounds 2-4 and feel strongly about the potential of finding quality starters. -- Field Yates, NFL draft analystMore: Has DT become a premium position? ... Will we ever see a RB go No. 1 again?What to expect for teams that need a quarterbackThis QB class certainly isn't as good as last year's group, but the 2025 class could see a few signal-callers picked in Round 1. Miami's Cam Ward is the presumed No. 1 overall pick, and he can give Tennessee some answers under center. Colorado's Shedeur Sanders and Ole Miss' Jaxson Dart are viewed as the other two passers who could be selected on Day 1. And some evaluators believe Louisville's Tyler Shough and Alabama's Jalen Milroe could be picked as early as the top of the second round. The Browns and Giants have obvious needs for a young franchise QB, but neither is likely to pick one over Hunter or Carter. That leaves the Saints (No. 9) and Steelers (No. 21) as the other prime spots where QBs could be selected on Thursday. New Orleans is one of the biggest wild cards in this year's draft, especially after the news of Derek Carr's shoulder injury. For teams more interested in waiting to pick a QB, Syracuse's Kyle McCord and Ohio State's Will Howard could be solid options in the third or fourth round. -- Jordan Reid, NFL draft analystMore: Can Sanders, Ward speed up their throw time? ... QB-only mock draft: Team fits in seven rounds (ESPN+) ... Q see Hunter primarily at wide receiver, but the Colorado standout should absolutely see plenty of action at cornerback, too. He has the speed, hands and instincts to be a true difference-maker at both positions. Hunter saw an incredible 1,458 snaps last season, and he posted great numbers: 96 catches, 1,258 yards and 15 touchdowns at WR, and 10 pass breakups and four interceptions at CB.ESPN IllustrationLet's look specifically at how he'd fit with the Browns, who have the No. 2 pick and seem like a sensible landing spot. Hunter could play full-time alongside wideout Jerry Jeudy and tight end David Njoku to electrify a lackluster pass game. The Browns need more reliable pass catchers, especially with the team's QB uncertainty. They could also sprinkle him in at corner. They have solid starters in Denzel Ward and Greg Newsome II, but Hunter would simply have to be on the field in key spots. If Cleveland is facing a close game, is it really going to leave Hunter on the sideline during an opponent's final few drives? No shot. He could also help in red zone defense. Hunter is just too much of a baller to limit him to offense or defense or defense or defense. -- Mel Kiper Jr., NFL draft analyst More: Bailey on HunterOur favorite potential team fits Michigan CB Will Johnson to the Falcons Johnson is more smooth than sudden, with explosive forward ability. He has the physical traits to play man coverage, but I like him best in a system that allows him to play top-down on the ball. That fits under coach Raheem Morris in an Atlanta defense that played zone coverage -- both split-safety and single-high -- on 61.2% of opponent dropbacks last season (12th in the league). Pairing Johnson with A.J. Terrell would give the Falcons two long and fluid corners. Johnson has a playmaking element to his game, posting nine interceptions and three defensive scores at Michigan. Atlanta needs that kind of turnover production. Iowa RB Kaleb Johnson to the BearsThe Bears could target Johnson to the BearsThe Bears that kind of turnover production to create big plays. Last season at Iowa, he rushed for 21 touchdowns and added 43 carries of 10 or more yards. Johnson would be a good fit for the outside zone scheme that new coach Ben Johnson has run in the past. And with an uptick in usage in an NFL pass game, he'd produce on screens and backfield releases for Chicago. -- Matt Bowen, NFL analystMore: Sanders' best fits (ESPN+)Some risers to watch Tai Felton, WR, MarylandI have Felton projected in the fourth round, and he has been mentioned often by NFL scouts as a riser thanks to his speedy play and ability to stretch the field as a vertical receiving option. He's seen as a strong candidate for a WR3 role in his rookie season with the skills to add to his plate once his route tree expands. Felton (6-foot-1, 183 pounds) caught 96 passes for 1,124 yards and nine scores last season. Our mock draft simulator allows users to act as the general manager of their favorite team, giving them the opportunity to make picks in all seven rounds and conduct trades throughout the draft. Draft Day Predictor Simulator Nick Martin, LB, Oklahoma State Martin is another late-rounder seen as a potential riser thanks to his predraft process. A former walk-on, the 6-foot, 221-pounder has the speed to chase down running backs and guarterbacks from the middle of the field. He missed a lot of the 2024 season, but he had 135 tackles in 2023. A late Round 3 selection wouldn't be a surprise.Rylie Mills, DT, Notre Dame As a potential 5-technique at the next level at 6-foot-5 and 291 pounds, Mills has a ton of intrigue for teams given his first-step quickness. He was banged up in 2024, which limited his predraft process, but games like his performance against Florida State -- when he posted three sacks -- are the type of rsum builders that could get him inside the top 100 picks. -- Matt Miller, NFL draft analystMore: College coaches pick sleepers (ESPN+) ... Biggest risers of the yearMaking bold predictionsOnly one quarterback will go in the first round. I always view QB draft hype with a doubtful eye, and while last year was big for late quarterback risers, this class doesn't hold a candle to that one. I think the Browns, Giants and Saints all have a long staring contest that ends with nobody trading back up into the first round. Omarion Hampton will outproduce Ashton Jeanty. Hampton is the best player in the class that we don't ever talk about. I get it -- Jeanty had an unbelievable season, and I think he has all it takes to be an excellent pro. But so does Hampton -- size, speed, tackle-breaking traits and third-down value. And because Hampton -- size, speed, tackle-breaking traits and third-down value. nucleus. Imagine Jeanty wasting away like Saquon Barkley on a Giants-like roster for his rookie deal, while Hampton is piling up easy yardage behind that Broncos' offensive line. The Ravens will trade up to steal Colston Loveland from the Chargers. Both Mark Andrews and Isaiah Likely are in contract years, and while this tight end class is deep, there's no doubt that Loveland and Tyler Warren are the cream of the crop. Loveland is a common mock draft fit to the Chargers at No. 22 in part because of his connection to ex-Michigan coach Jim Harbaugh. But older brother John could commit some Harbaugh crime by trading up from No. 27 to leapfrog the Chargers and draft Loveland. -- Ben Solak, NFL analystDan Graziano, NFL national reporter: My conversations over the weekend lead me to think there could be a run on pass rushers earlier than expected in the first round. After Abdul Carter goes No. 2 or No. 3 to the Browns or Giants, respectively, the spots where league executives think pass rushers could be selected include the Raiders at No. 6, Jets at No. 7, Panthers at No. 8, Saints at No. 9 and 49ers at No. 11. Whether it's Georgia edge guys such as Jalon Walker or Mykel Williams or disruptive defensive tackles, etc. in this class could default to taking talented guys who can get after quarterbacks. Jeremy Fowler, NFL national reporter: Teams around the league are closely watching New Orleans, which appears to have a disgruntled quarterback in Derek Carr. Do the Saints leverage the No. 9 or No. 40 picks for a QB? The team hasn't selected a first-round passer since Archie Manning in 1971, and new coach Kellen Moore needs a young passer with whom to build. The sense I get is that the No. 9 pick will go to another position -- offensive line is among the team's needs -- but the 40th selection could be a sweet spot for the second tier of quarterbacks. While Colorado's Shedeur Sanders and Ole Miss' Jaxson Dart are in the first-round conversation, Louisville's Tyler Shough and Alabama's Jalen Milroe could get pushed up into the early second or even late first round as a result. The Saints should stay nimble with that pick in case they love one of those signal-callers. But overall, the Saints should stay nimble with that pick in case they love one of those signal-callers. But overall, the Saints should stay nimble with that pick in case they love one of those signal-callers. planning. Here are the latest rumblings via ESPN+: The Titans' franchise has the No. 1 pick for the third time in the common draft era (since 1967), after previously selecting defensive end John Matuszak (1973) and Hall of Fame running back Earl Campbell (1978) as the Houston Oilers. Colorado two-way star Travis Hunter played 1,481 total snaps last season, 297 more than any other FBS player. Hunter was the only player in at least the past 45 years with 500 receiving yards and four interceptions in a season. Edge rusher Abdul Carter was a unanimous All-American and could be the first Penn State defensive player selected in the top 10 since defensive end Courtney Brown and linebacker LaVar Arrington went first and second overall, respectively, in 2000. Quarterback Shedeur goes in the top 10, the Sanders family would join the Mannings (Archie and Peyton/Eli) and the Matthews (Bruce and Jake) as the only father-son combinations to both be picked in the top 10 in the common draft era. There have been at least three quarterbacks selected in the first round in eight of the past nine drafts. The reigning national champion Ohio State Buckeyes had 15 players in Miller's seven-round mock draft (posted on March 27), the most of any school. If there are 15 Ohio State players drafted, it would be the program's most in a single year in the common draft era, surpassing the 14 players it had selected in 2004. Running backs with a draftable grade. Since the NFL draft moved to seven rounds in 1994, there have been only two drafts in which at least 30 running backs were selected -- 32 in 1996 and 30 in 2011. While the players drafted in the first round get most of the spotlight, a significant portion of a team's roster is built on Day 2 and Day 3.
